
LAURA

By Taylor Bradshaw

Daria Meyer - September 18, 2020

Story

Taylor comes on the abandoned stage to play a love song. While he is playing he sees the girl sitting on the from raw - the subject of his song. As long as he sings, she stays with him and disappears right after the last chord.

Synopsis

Very early in a morning, an hour before dawn. Taylor Bradshaw walks on the street, after his performance, he is tired, he has guitar around his shoulder. He takes the phone and dials, but there is a voice mail: "Hi this is Laura, I'm not in right now,...". Then he walks up the stage, that is old and empty. Noticing an old chair laying upside down, he takes it, sits down and starts playing. In the middle of the song we see a blurred silhouette of a girl. Several close ups show parts of her face and hands but never herself. Her image will remain a mystery. By the end of the song she comes up the stage and hugs Taylor from behind, he slowly turns his head and finishes the song, at this moment wide shot reveals the whole stage and Taylor, who sits there alone. He smiles.